Kim was returned to Los Angeles and will have to face charges in regard to peddling dope which seems better ground than the murder charge was.

PHELPS STREET IMPROVEMENT WILL PROCEED

A long mooted and vexing question was definitely settled Monday evening by the letting of a contract by the city board of trustees for the paving of Phelps street. The contract was let to the Hanrahan Co., who submitted the lowest of five bids to the board. The bid was accepted at $38,824.70.

Other bids submitted were Peres Bros., $50,273.45; M. Blumenkranz, $48,172.25; Peninsula Paving Co. $44,770.40, and W. A. Dontonville $42,404.07.

Of this cost one third will be paid by the county according to an agreement made with the board of supervisors by the property owners several weeks ago. The improvement of this street, which forms one of the main entrances into Redwood City has been the theme of much argumentive discussion in meetings of both the board of trustees of this city and of the county supervisors. Its final settlement will be a source of relief to those who have to travel over a roadway which has for some time been in very bad condition.

RUSE FREES MAN FROM COUNTY BASTILE HERE

Two men are badly wanted by the sheriff's office. One is a former prisoner at the county jail who gave the name of Oswald, and whose occupation is said to be that of a salesman, and who according to reports passes madchecks in his spare moments. The other man is an "agent" of Sheriff Lyle of Santa Clara county.

Oswald was safely lodged at the county jail, and held on a warrant issued in San Jose. He was to have been called for by someone from the office of Sheriff Lysle and taken to San Jose for trial, so when a man appeared stating that Lylse had sent him for the prisoner the officer on duty turned over the alleged forger to the supposed deputy sheriff, who signed for the prisoner, entering the anme of Wylie.

All was well until Sheriff Lysle called up later in regard to the prisoner. The sheriff's office explained that "Deputy Sheriff Wylie" had already called for the man and was on his way to San Jose. But Sheriff Lysle had never heard of "Deputy Sheriff Wylie" and since they left the jail nothing has been heard of Oswald and his keeper.

The earthquake shock of Friday morning served to remind us rather vividly of the classic shake of twenty years ago. But having had experience with both earthquakes and hurricanes, we will take the earthquake. They have the advantage of brevity. When you sit for six hours through a hurricane, expecting momentarily, that your house will collapse, you find your nerves well shaken even if the house survives.

LOCAL INDUSTRY TO SHOW FILMS

The growing of chrysanthemums which has been developed by the Japanese gardeners of this city into one of the largest industries of this district is to receive recognition in news reels of film companies, according to Mrs. Holms, secretary of the Redwood City chamber of commerce. From here chrysanthemums grown at local nurseries are shipped annually to all parts of the United States in refrigerating cars. Three carloads will be sent out within the next three days for sale in eastern cities. These three cars are in addition to the regular trade through here and those sent to San Francisco.

On Monday officials of some of the film companies, among them the Pathe Company, will come to Redwood City for the purpose of looking over the field, with a view of later in the week making pictures of the chyrsanthemums industry. If it is found possible to to photograph the flowers in the cheese-cloth enclosures in which they are grown, this will be done as well as showing the huge masses of cut blooms. It has also been suggested that if possible some well-known screen star be brought here and photographed among the fields of chrysanthemums.

MURRAY MOTOR COMPANY ANNOUNCES OPENING OF RICKENBACKER AGENCY

The motoring public of Redwood iCty will be interested in the announcement of the Murray Motor Company of the opening of the new Rickenbacker agency at 757 El Camino Real. Show rooms and service facilities are being pushed as fast as carpenters and workmen can produce them and the new motor concern is preparing to offer Redwood City people up to the minute servie on a complete line of fine motor cars.

In choosing Redwood City for his permanent location Mr. Murray said, "It is my firm belief that the people of Redwood City appreciate the best, and the Rickenbacker line appeals to lovers of fine motor cars, discriminating buyers who seek real value and comfort in motor travel. Rickenbacker is 'built up to a standard, not down to a price.'"

The selection of Redwood City for a permanent sales and serivce depot for Rickenbacker cars is indeed a tribute to the discrimination of Redwood City motorists as well as its a demonstration of the faith of the officials of the new concern in local business conditions.

Roy W. Murray, A. H. Oswald and Jack Whelan are the announced officials of the Murray Motor Company; each of whom has back of him years of service with Rickenbacker and a wide acquaintance in the autmotive field. It is the respect inspired and a wide experience which creates confidence in service and the Murray Motors are well equipped to give it.

The public is cordially invited to visit the new show rooms and inspect the line and become acquainted with the personell of the institution. It has been a slogan with Rickenbacker officials to 'fill each unforgiving minute with sixty seconds worth of distance run' and the Murray Motor Co. are anxious to convince the public in their newly chosen location that this confidence which has been built up with their clients has never been betrayed, but has been added to with each passing year by Rickenbacker performance.

REDWOOD CITY GARAGEMEN ARE GOOD SLEUTHS

That Tom and Al Davies, proprietors of the garage on the highway in this city have profited by the tales of Sherlock Holmes was demonstrated Wednesday evening when they traced a thief to his home and relieved him of a sack of money removed from the counter of their garage.

The thief was R. Oroquita, a shoemaker of this city, who called at the garage of the Davies Brothers, and seeing the bag of money on the counter, left again while the garagemen were busy, and with him the money also made its disappearance.

The discovery was soon made by the Davies brothers, who jumped into a rar, armed, one with a shotgun and one with a pistol, and gave rhase. They found tracing the thief to be an easy matter, as one wheel of his car was without a tire and left a mark on the pavement which led them to his home on King street.

Orquita was soon found and by the gentle persuasion of the shotghn and pistil, he prodoced the bag of coin taken from the garage.

Tom Davies then left his brother to guard the bandit, while he went to summon police officers. olice officers, Thorp, Roza and Genochio were soon found and they removed Orquita to the county jail, where he was booked on a charge of robbery.

Orquita appears, however, to have had his reasons for his act, for when asked at the jail why he took the money, he stated that he needed it.

VOTERS TO BE TOLD OF AMENDMENT NO. 4

A. J. Stebenne, well-known attorney of this city, is leading a move to educate the voters of Redwood City in regard to proposed amendment No. 4 on the ballot to be voted on at the November election. This amendment will increase the tax on gasoline by one cent per gallon, the money to be upsed in completing the road improvement of the state. It is an important one for this section of the country.

At the weekly meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce last Monday the amendment was discussed by William J. O'Brien of San Francisco, son of the late W. J. O'Brien, well known resident of this city, who until the time of his death a few months ago was manager of the Sequoia theatre.

The speaker pointed out the fact that this method of taxation is the most fair and equitable in this case, as it places the heaviest tax on the heaviest users of the highways and is graduated proportionately ti the use if the highway.

Mayor Henry Beeger of this city was also a speuaker at the meeting and showed that the passage of this bill is imperative if the highway improvement plans are to be carried forward. These plans include the construction of the proposed bay shore highway through this county.

A. J. Stebenne was chairman of the meeting, and called for volunteers in doing campaign work through the various precincts on this measure. His request met with ready response.

At the meeting of the Kiwanis club Wednesday, D. R. Stafford mae a short talk to the members in favor of the amendment and passed out windshield stockers for the amendment.

William F. Rose of San Francisco also addressed the chamber of commerce Monday in regard to amendment No. 8, a sectional measure intended to secure for the southern part of the state the greater bulk of the road funds of the state. The voters were asked to give this measure their undivided disapprival at the election.

PROMINENT MAN DIES SUDDENLY

FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS SINCE BIG EARTHQUAKE

The slight shake of early yesterday morning had no other effect than to arouse the tired slumberer from his gentle dreams. The tremblor, however, was a remainder of the great catastrophe of October 1868. That earthquake occurred five minutes before 8 o'clock on Wednesday, October 21, 1868. There are many old timers still residing in this county who recall the disaster.

The courthouse here was badly wrecked. The clerk was compelled to occupy the law office of Harvey Kincaid for temporary offices. The board of supervisors met the next day to plan for repairing the wrecked building. The chimneys on the American house were thrown down. The brick block owned by Mr. Merrill on Main street was badly demolished. San Francisco was wrecked and five persons were killed by falling walls. It is singular that the little tremor should occur almost at the same time of the month as the big quake of 1868.

2000 Seat Show House to Be Built Immediatly

Announcement is made by Ellis J. Arkush, operating a circuit of theatres in Peninsula towns, that plans are now being prepared for the erection of a new theatre in Redwood City, and that work is to be started at the earliest possible moment.

The planning is in the hands of Reid Brothers of San Francisco who have many of California's leading theatres to their credit.

The new theatre will be equipped to handle every type of theatrical attraction, in addition to being complete in all the details of comfort and service to which theatre patrons have become accustomed.

Seating capacity, approximately two thousand, anticipates the continued growth of Redwood City on the basis of its steady progress the last few years. The type of building, while not finally decided upon, will be something distinctive and creditable to the city's buiding program.

The Arkush circuit upon completion of this theatre and another soon to be started in Palo Alto will have in operation four major houses in three towns and the possibility of further building at a later date.

Otway J. Cosgrave, resident manager of the Sequoia theatre, states that Mr. Arkush is anxious to speed up work here to make up for delay in starting occasioned by the opening of the Peninsula Theatre in Burlingame.

KIWANIANS HEAR TALK ON RUSSIA

Conditions in Russia under the regime of the Soviet government were strikingly brought before the members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday in an address by Baroness de Ropp of Russia. The Baroness in an interesting way told of the brutalities which have been inflicted upon the people of that country by the Soviet government.

Dr. John N. Blood, who saw service in Russia as a captain in the army, acted as chairman of the meeting.

In her address the Baroness told of the activities of the Communists in this country and of efforts made to win the confidence of the school children and to turn them against the United States. Activities of various organizations at work among the children, especially in the southern part of the state were recounted, and she showed that instead of working for harmony and peace as they profess, these Communistic organizations were working for a cival war in this nation.

SUPERVISORS REFUSE SAN MATEO REQUEST

That the San Mateo chamber of commerce was asking too much of the board of supervisors when it requested that that board pass a resolution urging the San Francisco supervisors to choose San Mateo as the site of the proposed San Francisco air field. The request was made upon the board by Miss Elizabeth Holl of the San Mateo commercial body.

The request met with the instant opposition of Supervisor Hickey, who stated that South San Francisco was also being considered by the San Francisco committee as a site for the field and that it would be grossly overstepping its powers and duties for the board of supervisors to pass any such resolution.

Even Mrs. Brown, supervisor of the Second township, was forced to admit that the request was and unfair one, and state that while she would like to see the proposed field at San Mateo, she felt it her duty to oppose any action as sectional in its motives by the board of supervisors of the county.

The matter was given some discussion, and finally a new resolution was proposed urging the San Francisco supervisors to locate the flying field in San Mateo county. This resolution, proposed by Supervisor Hickey and seconded by Supervisor Brown met with general acceptance and was adopted.

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

WHAT satisfaction there is to the hostess who knows that everybody is having a good time at her party. And what fun to listen to the obs and ahs of the guests as they make merry over the cunning party favors, for favors have so much to do with the success of one's party.

Now that the fall and winter party season is just beginning, it is high time for those who plan to entertain to get busy at making up a collection of pretty favors. Here's a new idea—harmonica favors for the men and rose pincushions for the ladies. Try it and see how beautifully it will work out. For the harmonica, cover little boxes with white crepe paper, painting on it a face with water colors. Make wire arms, black feet cut out of mat stock, dress in emerald-green tissue. Study the little figure shown last in this group as to just how it should look. When each male guest starts to play on the little harmonica, he found in the box, no question as to the fun and din which will follow.

The rose pincushion takes form of a dainty little basket filled with flowers, just as you can see at the top to the right in the picture. Make seven little tissue paper rosebuds with soft cushionlike centers. Shape these into a bouquet and set them in a paper nut cup, attaching a paper-wound wire handle. Into the hearts of the roses stick a few pins just as a suggestion to the recipient as to the use of this little flower basket.

It is always more difficult to think of favors for men than for women. The fantastic beetle which is pictured second at the top is exceedingly clever, especially if laid flat with its wire legs sprawling out in every direction. Its body is really a cigar held in place by coils of wire or rings of pasteboard if preferred.

In this group is also a cigarette favor. A coquettish face is painted on an oval piece of cardboard. The ruffle of tissue pasted around it is one and a half inches wide. A green feather trims the hat.

The Japanese lady carries some chosen article back of her parasol. There is also a halloween figure shown here dressed in pumpkin-yellow paper.

For our hats, our wraps, our frocks, choose any material just so it's velvet seems to be the sentiment of the mode. It is evident that velvet will reign, is reigning as the fabric supreme. Not that velvet in itself is a novelty, but its uses for all occasions gives to it a unique interpretation.

The new velvets are both printed and plain, in both chiffon and heavyweight and are the called-for fabric for street, dinner and evening costume.

For daytime wear the ensemble of extreme style is of velvet, black or deep beautiful colors such as claret, jungle green, also beige. With this is interworked for blouse and linings gorgeous silks and metal cloths.

As a trimming for crepe and satin dresses self-colored velvet is a most popular theme. The velvet appears in tiers and borderings.

Quite the latest and most charming Paris style note is the chiffon velvet evening frock in lovely colorings. A very beautiful Agnes model is shown in the picture. Melon pink chiffon velvet is the medium for this exquisite creation. The V-neck and the profuse shirring are outstanding features. The panels are embroidered in pearls.

Very effective is the sleeveless low round-neck black velvet frock. Such a dress will prove at once a luxury and an economy, in that with change of accessories it can be transformed in appearance and thus do duty for many a social occasion. A deep lace or flesh-colored georgette cape-collar is suggested. It would be well also to have made to order a pair of detachable pink crepe sleeves. Removable and gayly embroidered peasant sleeves would prove effective also—or without any accessories, except costume jewelry and a shoulder bouquet, the sleeveless black velvet gown is a happy possession.

The last word in fashion is the pastel-colored chiffon velvet two-piece frock for sports wear. It is styled similar to the crepe jumper-and-skirt models so popular during the summer.

Plaid velvet tunics are registered for smart daytime wear. Brocade chiffon velvet is also fashionable for the dressier afternoon frock.

Silver and Mist

For the young girl, a dance dress of silver lace and white tulle is a suitable expression of her youth and innocence. The simple round neck line and bouffant skirt is a strictly debutante style in this type of frock.

—Caracul Retains Its Favor

Caracul is again slated for a decided vogue this winter. It is especially smart in cocoa brown shades, although gray is also much in evidence.

High Crowns

Hats are high of crown and wide of brim. Most of the crowns are softened by a draped or tucked variation. The brims droop more than in the old-fashioned sailor.

Red and Blue for Youth

Smart costumes for the younger girl exploit the vogue of navy blue brightened with touches of red. Almost invariably the hat repeats this combination of colors.

Good Printing
THE kind of printing you pays dividends is the kind you should have. Pale, muddy, poorly executed printed matter is worse than none. The quality of your business is often judged by the quality of your stationery — inferior printing gives an impression of cheapness that is hard to overcome, while good printing carries with it a desirable suggestion of quality.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Alleged Corrupt Political Ring in Indiana Is Facing Exposure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHILE the rest of the country looks on with intense interest, Indiana is listening aghast to revelations exposing a great alleged political conspiracy spreading over the entire state and threatening to involve many of its most prominent citizens. Thomas H. Adams, publisher of Vincennes and chairman of an investigating committee named by the Republican Editorial association of Indiana, responsible for the exposure, and whose charges are based on the stories told by D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan now serving a life sentence for murder. Stephenson, who says he was "framed," seeks vindication and revenge; and the editorial association's committee has made repeated demands that Gov. Ed Jackson for a complete investigation. Mr. Adams, asserting that the governor has dodged the issue, has been trying to persuade the Indianapolis city council to hear the charges before a mass meeting. He has made repeated attempts to reach Stephenson in his prison, but the warden, backed by the prison board and the governor, will let no one in to interview the convict. The latter, however, managed to smuggle out a letter in which he said in part:

"I have in a place of security the following described documents:

"1. A written contract by the governor of which a certain prominent official of the state of Indiana agrees to pay me the sum of eight hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($825,000), or three times the amount expended in his behalf for election.

"2. I have notes representing the above amount, signed by the official.

"3. I have a written memorandum signed by the same official acknowledging the amounts expended by me in his behalf to be two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($275,000, or one-third of the sum above mentioned. This memo recites an agreement where I lose all if he was defeated in the election, but receive three-for-one if he won.

"4. A written agreement with the mayors of three large cities in Indiana binding them to repay me on a ratio of three-for-one for all money I advanced in their behalf, and further agreements are in my possession where these same men agree to allow certain individuals to name all appointments.

"5. I hold two photographic copies (and the plate) of an agreement by and between the mayor of a large city and an organization politician in which the mayor agrees to allow that politician to name all of the city appointees of a certain class. I also have eight affidavits of reputable men who saw the photograph made from the original. I later delivered the original to the politician to whom it was addressed by the mayor.

"6. I have perhaps thirty or forty contracts with less important public officials who have agreed to repay me for funds advanced to them for campaign purposes."

Publication of this by Mr. Adams, of no apparent avail, he next made public a photostatic copy of the following amazing contract bearing the alleged signature of J. L. Duvall, mayor of Indianapolis and president of the Marion County State bank:

"In return for the political support of D. C. Stephenson, in the event I am elected mayor of Indianapolis, I promise not to appoint any man as member of the board of public works without they first have the indorsement of D. C. Stephenson," the contract reads.

"I also agree and promise to appoint Claude Worley as chief of police and Earl Klenck as captain.

"Signed by me, this 12th day of February, 1925."

With this he gave out a letter purporting to have been written and signed by Duvall. It is written on the letterhead of his bank, addresses Stephenson as "Dear Steve" and continues: "I was talking with your friend just now and in regard to Ramsey getting (off) the ticket, if this is done I will—if the candidate for treasurer—go down the line with you and the boys and do all I can for the success of our ticket this fall.

"With best regards, I am as ever yours truly, J. L. Duvall."

Mayor Duvall admitted that he wrote this letter but declared the alleged contract was a "fake." Mr. Adams said he could prove the signature on the contract was the mayor's, and he also asserted he had plenty of documents and evidence to prove the existence of the corrupt political ring which he seeks to get before the whole people of the state.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has let it be known that he will not take an active part in this fall's congressional election campaign in the way of speeches or letters in behalf of Republican candidates. He refuses to yield to the urgent requests of the campaign leaders, who have represented to him that participation in the campaign is his duty as the titular head of his party. To this the semi-official reply is that, while he is the leader of the party, it is not customary for the Chief Executive to assume such leadership in an "off year" election, the only precedent for such action being Woodrow Wilson's ill-fated appeal for the return of a Democratic congress in 1918.

Political wiseacres say the President's decision is dictated largely by caution, and call attention to the fact that it spares him and the Republican candidates embarrassment, since he and many of them cannot well stand on the same platform. For instance, of the 28 Republican candidates for the senate, 18 are basing their bid for election, chiefly or partly on opposition to Mr. Coolidge's policies relating to the world court and to agricultural relief.

FLOODS in Illinois, Kansas and Oklahoma during the last week have done immense damage to the crops, and many towns and villages have been inundated. Broken levees of the Illinois river let the waters into Beardstown, Ill., rendering hundreds of people homeless and almost completely isolating the city. In Peoria large industrial plants were forced to close because of flooded fire pits and basements.

TRAPPED about three miles underground by an explosion in the Roane Iron company mine at Rockwood, Tenn., 28 miners met death. Rescue crews worked hard but in vain, being hampered by excessive heat and smoke and the danger from gas.

CHAOS reigns in central China and while the armies of the various factions are fighting desperately along the Yangtse river, it is the non-combatants that are suffering most. As an instance, the correspondent of the Chicago Tribune tells of witnessing the attempt of the Chinese Red Cross to get the civilians out of besieged Wuchang on launches and lighters. There was room for fewer than 6,000 on the boats, but 50,000 broke through the military cordon and surged out on the piers, from which they fell into the river by hundreds, about 300 of them being drowned. The refugees were emaciated with starvation and told pitiful stories of their sufferings.

Warfare between the Japanese and the Manchurians was imminent last week along the Corean border. Throughout Manchuria, adjoining Corea, are about 1,500,000 Coreans, mostly farmers, who are Japanese subjects. Recently the Manchurian government repudiated the agreement permitting Japanese subjects to lease agricultural lands, and sent troops to confiscate the crops. The Japanese rushed troops, machine guns and Red Cross detachments to the border and ordered all garrison troops in that region to be held in readiness for action.

BECAUSE he permitted one of the Hohenzollerns, the oldest son of the former crown prince, to march with the Prussian guards in the recent maneuvers, Gen. Hans von Seeckt, commander in chief in the German reichswehr, has lost his job. He was considered the complete militarist, protesting against his rejuvenation of the German army. General von Seeckt created the present army, 100,000 strong, every man a perfect soldier, chosen from 5,000,000 available. Under his plan, it is figured that when the next war comes Germany will have 1,000,000 trained officers and sergeant-majors.

The Prussian state government and the Hohenzollerns have reached an agreement on how much Prussia shall pay the former royal family to relinquish its claims on everything it left behind. The former kaiser will get 20,000,000 gold marks ($5,000,000) in cash, 280,000 acres of land from his former estates, and three castles, at Schwes, Fuerrath, and Wildenbruch, and the former crown prince gets Oels castle in addition.

DICTATOR PILSUDSKI ended his dispute with the Polish parliament by accepting the resignation of the Bartel cabinet and himself taking the post of premier. His cabinet is declared to be the strongest and best that Poland has yet had. Besides the premiership, Pilsudski holds the war portfolio. August Zaloski is again minister of foreign affairs.

THE American Federation of Labor opened its annual convention in Detroit, and incidentally got into a wrangle with the churches of that city. President William Green had been invited to speak at a Y. M. C. A. meeting and other labor leaders had been asked to occupy ten Detroit pulpits, but these invitations were withdrawn at the instance of the board of commerce and the building trades association, which charged that the aims of the federation were not in harmony with ideals of American patriotism. This was vigorously protested by the federation. The federation voted to organize the automobile industry.

SO SERIOUS have become the depradations of the European corn borer in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana that the national corn borer committee was called to meet in Chicago for the purpose of devising some plan to check the advance of the pest toward Illinois and Iowa. The insects are advancing westward at the rate of twenty to twenty-five miles yearly. Dean Curtis of the Iowa State Agricultural college, who called the committee, says the borer is the most formidable pest that ever has threatened the Midwest and that its invasion of the great hog-raising states would be a dire calamity, since they cannot substitute other crops for corn, as Michigan and Ohio are doing.

WHILE Queen Marie of Rumania was buying beautiful gowns in Paris, our government was laying plans for her reception. The State department announced that she would be met at quarantine in New York on October 18 by Assistant Secretary of State J. Butler Wright and taken to Washington on a special train. The next day President and Mrs. Coolidge will give a dinner in her honor. The story that the queen had accepted any contract to appear in the movies in America was formally denied by a member of her party.

PERSONS who followed with avidity the tortuous course of the Stillman divorce litigation—and their name is legion—were interested to read that James "Bud" Stillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stillman, is engaged to wed Miss Lena Wilson, an eighteen-year-old Scotch-Canadian girl who was a servant in the Stillman house in Canada, as were her two sisters and a brother. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson said they were highly pleased with their daughter's choice. The lad is a student in Princeton university, so the wedding will not take place until next June, after his graduation.

FOR the purpose of promoting commercial aviation the airplane in which Commander Byrd flew over the North pole is making a tour of the country in the course of which it will visit about 40 cities. On the first leg of the journey, from Washington to New York, Byrd was at the controls, but for the rest of the trip the pilot will be Floyd Bennett, who made the polar flight with Byrd. The expenses of the expedition are being defrayed by the Daniel Guggenheim fund, which is acting in co-operation with the Department of Commerce.

South Africans Wish to Remain in Empire

Doubts concerning General Smuts's attitude toward South Africa remaining within the British empire were set at rest when he announced that in attending the imperial conference he had no wish to be anything else than a "helpful associate in advancing the interests of the British commonwealth of nations."

General Hertzog continued: "We have to apply ourselves to the task of the conference in a spirit of co-operation, seeking by united action to promote the common interests of us all. One of the main tasks, if not the main task, with which the conference will be confronted, will be, if I mistake not, to have the co-operation between the member states of the commonwealth placed on a more certain and satisfactory basis.

"If success in that respect is to result, questions of fundamental nature affecting empire relations, both domestic and foreign, will have to be grappled with and decided. . . . Given good will, courage and faith, we ought to be able to accomplish much that will ensure permanency and harmony in our relations in future."

General Hertzog's declaration is regarded as equivalent to a denial of the rumors that the Nationalist party, of which he is leader, is working for secession from the empire.

Another dominion premier to arrive was Walter Monroe of Newfoundland, who said he had no constitutional adjustments to propose.

Fordham Gridders Get a Bit of Action Into Practice

The photograph shows Walsh, Fordham tackle, on the ground with the ball after Bruce, tackle, had furnished a bit of action after missing his man during the first practice of the season at Fordham field.

BILL SOUTHWORTH ON FIVE CLUBS

With Indians, Braves, Giants, Pirates and Cards.

Bill Southworth, veteran outfielder, who was traded by the Giants to the Cardinals, is now in his tenth season as a major league player. The St. Louis club is the fifth major league team of which he has been a member, as he has also played with the Giants, Pirates, Braves and Indians.

Southworth began his professional career as an outfielder and he has played that position ever since. His first engagement was with the Portsmouth team in 1912. He remained with that team during most of the following season. In August of that year he was obtained by the Indians, but he did not take part in any games with the Cleveland club. Several days after being obtained by the Indians he was transferred to the Toledo club of the American association. He finished that season with the Toledo club and he participated in a total of 37 games, batting .222.

After remaining in the American association until the middle of the season of 1915, Southworth was recalled by the Indians. He took part in 60 games with the Cleveland club during that campaign and he batted .220. Late in that season he was transferred to the Portland club af the Pacific Coast league.

During the entire season of 1916 Southworth remained with the Portland team. He took part in 171 games in the outfield with that club and his batting average was .300. At the end of that season he was signed by the Birmingham club of the Southern association. He played in 103 games with Birmingham during the season of 1917 and he batted .285. He remained with Birmingham during the first half of the following season. He played in 64 games with the Birmingham club that season and he batted .314.

During the season of 1918 Southworth was obtained from the Birmingham club by the Pirates and he has been in the National league ever since.

Paddy Driscoll Signs

Paddy Driscoll, star player of the Chicago Cardinal professional football team of the National league, has signed a contract to play with the Chicago Bears, managed by George Halas and Ed. Sternaman, former University of Illinois stars. Halas said Driscoll would be the second highest priced professional football player in America, only Harold Grange exceeding him.

Golf Is Favorite Sport of President Heydler

"My favorite sport is golf," declares John A. Heydler, president of the National league. "I find baseball my recreation. It is my business, too, but if I were suddenly removed from the presidency I would attend the games regularly just the same.

"That's the sport for youngsters. I don't believe in golf as a game for youth, because the lads of today need something more strenuous. Football, baseball, soccer, any sport that demands personal contact.

"Golf is for those advanced in years, who can no longer run bases or carry the pigskin. It gives them walking exercise and the use of muscles that otherwise would remain idle. Swinging clubs, of course, puts into play every part of the body."

Let Golf Links Alone

Chick Evans says that golf clubs make a mistake in lengthening their courses for championships. Scioto moved the tees back and stretched the course to more than 6,200 yards. Golfers that can drive the ball a long way have a distinct advantage. "Long drives compel the fellows whose drives are not so long to overpress, and by overpressing they drive wild. What a disaster a wild drive brings you on any course," says Evans. Other golfers agree with him.

Says Concentration and Determination Will Win

There are women players who go up to the ball and putt without any hesitancy, says Cecil Leitch. The results are so good at times that it makes the ordinary mortal wonder whether she ought to adopt a similar casual manner, but in the long run a strong combination of determination and concentration on the green will reap its reward.

Speaking of my own experiences I am convinced that my mind is not on the task in hand half the time. I am endowed with a particularly keen sense of hearing and, when playing before a crowd, I constantly find myself listening to whispered remarks when I should be concentrating to an extent which would make this eavesdropping impossible.

I am constantly asked why I do not learn to putt, but few people realize how difficult it is to practice this part of the game. To my mind there is nothing simpler than to put approach putts stone dead and hole out with regularity from a reasonable distance when nothing is dependent upon the result.

It is a very different story in an important event, for then the yard putt is doubly difficult and the long approach putts become terrifying.

Iowa College First to Place Turkey Day Ban

The beginning of a crusade against Thanksgiving day football by colleges has been announced by the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education.

The intent, it is said, is to educate the American public toward restoration of the fundamental observance of Thanksgiving day as an occasion for serious observance rather than as an athletic anniversary.

The first college to announce abandonment of its Thanksgiving football game is Parsons college, at Fairfield, Iowa, one of the 54 Presbyterian colleges in the United States. The annual Thanksgiving event at Parsons has been the game with Iowa Wesleyan.

It is anticipated that other Presbyterian colleges, will follow suit when their officials have had opportunity to consider the suggestion of the educational board.

Purple Coach Says Pro Games Need Stabilizers

Before it can be on a par with the intercollegiate game, professional football will have to get coaches like Zuppke, Yost and Rockne, is the opinion of Glenn Thistlethwaite, Northwestern coach.

"The pro game needs stabilizers," Thistlethwaite says. "It has drawn large crowds in several instances, but it was the individual players and not the attraction of competing teams that created the interest.

"The professional game may some day be accepted with the same favor as the college game, but I believe that day is a long way off. Professional football needs more organization, a clean set of rules that will be lived up to and a schedule that must be followed."

Plan to Judge Umpires

A new system of judging baseball umpires has been advanced by Marty Krug, manager of the Los Angeles team. Krug suggests that the president of the league should get opinions from the eight managers regarding the ability of the various umpires, and, in addition, 12 players of "calm judgment," should also be asked their verdict. "You can't judge an umpire from the 'grandstand,'" Krug declares. Other ball players agree with the Los Angeles manager.

For Governor	C. C. YOUNG
For Lieutenant Governor	Buron Fitts
For U .S. Senator	S. M. SHORTRIDGE
For Rep. in Congress, 8th Dist.	A. M. FREE

VOTE AS YOU PLEASE—BUT VOTE

Even the strenuous campaigning in California before the recent primary and the keen rivalry among candidates, brought out to the polls only about 55 per cent of the registered vote. This is hailed as being a larger vote than usual. But it is far too small. Almost one-half of those who qualified to vote did not take the time and trouble to go to the polls. This is bad citizenship on the part of those who thus defaulted. This species of indifference is growing. A smaller percentage of eligible voters are voting today than in the past. The habit of non-voting is growing. This indifference is throttling an influential section of American citizenship. Approximately one-half of all qualified voters are chocking their own voice in public affairs. They are permitting a minority to do all the speaking at the ballot-. The voice of the people is expressed by a minority of the people. This is deadly dangerous to good government.

Come to the polls on November 2nd and vote for the entire Republican ticket, Samuel M. Shortridge for U. S. senator, C. C. Young for governor, Buron Fitts for lieutenant governor and A. M. Free for congress.

A COMMENDABLE ACTION

Too much cannot be done, we believe, by the city officials and the citizens of the town to keep alive the business activities of the city in which they live and by which they subsist. In line with this thought we wish to commend the board of trustees for the action taken at their meeting Monday evening in passing the following resolution:

"Whereas there is located at Redwood City the plant of the Pacific Portland Cement Company manufacturing Golden Gate brand of Portland cement, and—

"Whereas said plant employes a large number of residents of Redwood City, and is of great benefit to the city. Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of trhstees that we recommend the use of Golden Gate Brand of Portland Cement in all public work in said city, and request all contractors to use said brand of cement."

The point of the trustees is well taken, and should, we believe, be applied to every line of industry. Wherever possible the local concern or merchant should be given the preference. He pays his taxes, buys his goods and spends his money in Redwood City. He should be given consideration over the outside merchant or firm who contributes nothing to the welfare or advancement of the city.

McINERNEY URGED FOR ELECTION

The son of the late Supreme Court Justice Thomas J. Lennon says, "the fight that Justice Lennon fought must not be let die. Joseph McInerney will carry on intelligently and courageously those ideals which characterized Justice Lennon's judicial career."

California men and women who believed in Justice Lennon's liberal principles and his efforts to emancipate our highest court, will vote for Joseph McInerney to guarantee the continuation of the beloved jurist's ideals.

All but one of the candidates seeking election to the late Justice Thomas J. Lennon's unexpired term on the Supreme Court bench not only actively opposed that beloved jurist during his recent campaign, but are opposed to the ideals and principles for which he sacrificed his life.

Joseph McInerney, Justice Lennon's friend and campaign manager, is the only one of the four candidates who stands for the well-known Lennon liberalism. McInerney is able, fearless and independent. He is entirely free of the influences of the cliques, attempting to control our courts, which which Justice Lennon fought.

In the words of Justice Lennon's son, "the fight that Justice Lennon fought must not be let die. McInerney will carry on intelligently and courageously those ideals which characterized Justice Lennon's judicial career.

If you are one of the 300,000 who so emphatically stamped a tribute to Justice Lennon's life work on your ballot on August 31, last, you must not fail to vote for Joseph McInerney on November 2 to "carry on" the ideals and principles of Justice Lennon.

—o—o—o—

Every voter in San Mateo County is urged to vote YES on the initiative measure Number Four and NO on number eight.

—o—o—o—

Vote for C. C. Young, S. M. Shortridge, Buron Fitts and A. M. Free, there publican candidates, on November 2nd. The are good men, all of them.

A SECOND SOLOMON

The manner in which District Attorney Swart handled the case of the Chinaman accused of the murder of Chin Fook Hay at Menlo Park is as worthy to go down in history, we think as the well-known case of Solomon and the child of disputed parentage. In handling this case as he did the district attorney showed a tact, an ingenuity, and a knowledge of Oriental tong warfare; and saved the life of a man entirely innocent of the crime with which he was charged. It was as neat a ruse as we have ever heard of in the courts of criminal proceedure. San Mateo county is fortunate in having in the person of its district attorney, not only an able prosecutor, but a man with the highest qualifications as a fair and wise jurist and judge.

—o—o—o—

Senator S. M. Shortridge's home county should give him a unanimous vote on November 2nd. He deserves it.

San Mateo County should be the banner county for C. C. Young for governor on November 2nd.

Vote for the one cent increase in the gasoline tax, thus assuring the people of the peninsula the completion of the Bayshore highway. Vote YES on measure No. 4 and NO on No. 8.

Vote for proposition No. 1. The Veterans' Welfare Bond Act of 1925. Not a cent additional taxation, simply loaning credit of the state. The soldier boys who donned the kahki in defence of the country deserve this. Vote for proposition No. 1.

Vote for Joseph McInerney for supreme judge and thus place a worthy, able and just man in the high tribunal. We need such men there.

Answers to popular questions about California's largest bank

Why do statewide resources insure strength and stability?

For the same reason that the investments of far-sighted capitalists and seasoned investors are distributed over a wide range of securities—located in different sections of the nation in order to obtain the maximum degree of safety.

Not only are Bank of Italy resources scattered throughout California, from Oregon to the Mexican line, but the institution also has over one hundred million dollars of its assets invested in government, state, county and city bonds.

No financial institution should place "all its eggs in one basket." Diversification and wide distribution means security in the highest obtainable degree.

The Bond Department of this bank offers an unusual service for investors

Because 4 out of every 10 Buyers Now Choose the MAYTAG

Two More Trainloads of Maytags ordered for California Homes

More California housewives have put the stamp of approval on the Maytag—the washer with the cast-aluminum tub. More and more California women are eager to own the washer that brings such a short and easy washday. That gives them such cleanly-washed clothes without hand-rubbing!

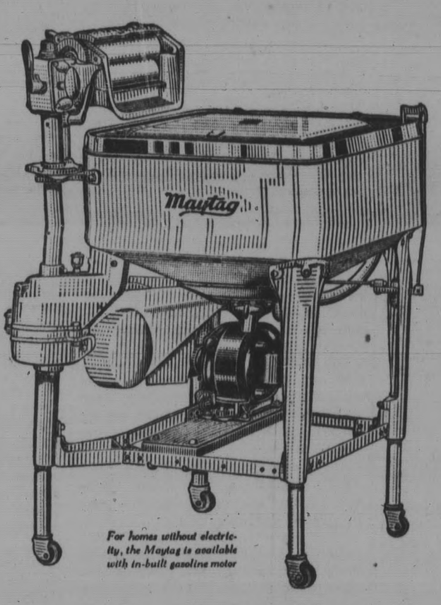
Why California housewives chose the Maytag!

BECAUSE OF THE FASTER WASHING—
big tubfuls washed in 3 to 7 minutes. Whole washings—50 lbs. of clothes (dry weight) washed in one short hour.

BECAUSE OF THE CLEANER WASHING—
Everything washed without hand-rubbing, even collars, cuffs and wristbands.

BECAUSE OF THE GREATER TUB CAPACITY
—the Maytag tub is "machinery-free" and holds four gallons more than other washers.

BECAUSE OF THE SELF-CLEANING TUB—
The Maytag tub drains and cleans itself in 30 seconds after the washing is done.



For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor

Why California housewives chose the Maytag!

BECAUSE OF THE EXTENSION LEGS—
Permitting raising or lowering the Maytag to suit the height of the operator. Adds comfort to washday.

BECAUSE CLOTHES CAN BE PUT IN OR TAKEN OUT of the Maytag while the washer is running, making it possible to wash and wring at the same time.

BECAUSE OF THE SEVEN-WAY SWINGING WRINGER that instantly adjusts itself to a handkerchief or a blanket and wrings both dry.

BECAUSE OF THE COMPACTNESS OF THE MAYTAG—
That permits its use in any space that will accommodate a chair.

The GIRL in the MIRROR

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

(By The Century Company.) WNU Service

STORY FROM THE START

Laurie Devon, a gay young chap somewhat inclined to wildness, has recently succeeded as a playwright. His wealthy sister Barbara, who has helped him to succeed, has just been married and is going to Japan, leaving Laurie on his own. Epstein and Banga, his theatrical partners, have promised Barbara to keep an eye on Laurie. They scold him for his laziness of late, and he retorts that he seeks adventure. From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite. From the elevator boy in the girl's house Laurie learns the girl's name is Mayo. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He rushes into her apartment, and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of danger.

"When we were over in your studio," he said, "I admitted that twice in my life I had tried to—make away with myself. Only two other persons in the world know that, but I'd like to tell you about it, if you don't mind."

She looked at him. There were strange things in the look, things that thrilled him, and other things he subconsciously resented, without understanding why. When she spoke there was a more personal note in her voice than it had yet held.

"You?" she asked; and she added almost lightly, "That seems absurd."

"I know."

Laurie spoke with the new humility he had found only today.

"You think that because I'm so young I couldn't have been desperate enough for that. But—you're young, too."

He was looking straight at her as he spoke. Her eyes, a little hard and challenging, then dropped.

"That's different," she muttered.

He nodded.

"I know the causes were different enough," he agreed. "But the feeling back of them, that pushes one up against such a proposition, must be pretty much the same sort of thing. Anyway, it makes me understand; and I consider that it gives me a claim on you, and the privilege of trying to help you."

Her eyes were still cast down, and suddenly she flushed, a strange, dark flush that looked out of place on the pure whiteness of her skin. She had the exaggerated but wholesome pallor of skin that often goes with reddish hair and red-brown eyes. It does not lend itself becomingly to flushes, and this deep flush lingered, an unwelcome visitor, throughout her muttered, almost ungracious words.

"Oh, please don't talk about it," she said, brusquely. "It's no use. I know you mean to be kind, but you can't do anything."

"Oh, but that's just where you're wrong." Laurie spoke with a cheerful assurance he did not feel. "If I hadn't been there myself, I'd talk all sorts of twaddle to you, and do more harm than good; and I'd probably let you go on thinking you were facing a trouble that no one could help. Instead of that, you and I are going to hold your bugaboo up to the light, and see just what it is and how small it is. And then—" he smiled at her—"we're going to get rid of it together."

She echoed his words, vaguely, as if not knowing quite what to say.

"Get rid of it?"

"Yes. Tell me what it is, and I'll show you how it can be downed."

She pushed back her chair, as if anxious to put a greater distance between them.

"No," she exclaimed, nervously, "it's impossible; I can't talk about it." Then, in an obvious effort to side-track the issue, "You said you wanted to tell me about your—experience."

"I do, but it isn't a nice story. Fortunately, it won't take long." He spoke reluctantly. It was not easy to hook two such memories out of the darkest pool of his life and hold them up to a stranger.

"Oh, I was a young idiot," he rushed on, "and I suppose I hadn't the proper start-off. At least I like to think there's some excuse for me. My father and mother died when I was in knickerbockers, and I grew up doing very much as I pleased. I—made a bad job of it. Before I was twenty-one I was expelled from college and I had worked up a pretty black reputation. Then I gambled and lost a lot of money I didn't have, and it began to look as if about the only safe place for me was the family vault.

"I made two efforts to get there. The first time a wise old doctor stopped me and never told any one about it. The second time one of my chums took a hand in the game. I don't know why they did it. I don't suppose either my pal of the doctor thought I was worth saving. But they talked to me like Dutch uncles, and my chum kept at it till I gave him my word that I'd never attempt anything of the sort again."

"You were just an unhappy boy," she said, as if thinking aloud, "with all life before you and many friends to back you up."

"And you," he suggested, "are just an unhappy girl with all life before you. I don't know anything about your friends, but I'll wager you've got a lot of them."

She shook her head.

"Not one," she said, slowly. "I mean, not one I dare to call on, now."

"I like that! You've got me to call on, right here."

This time she really smiled at him. It was a pathetic little smile, but both lips and eyes took part in it. He waited, but she said no more. He began to fear that his confidence had been given to no purpose. Evidently she had no intention of making a confession in return. He resumed his attack from a new angle.

"You've been disappointed in something or some one," he said. "Oh," as she made a gesture, "don't think I'm belittling it! I know it was something big. But the finish you chose wasn't meant to be, or it would have come off. You see that don't you? The very sun in its course took pains to show you to me in time to stop it. That means something, Miss Mayo."

She seemed slightly startled.

"It is Miss Mayo, isn't it? That's the name the elevator boy gave me, yesterday."

"It will do." She spoke absently, already on the trail of another thought. Suddenly she caught it.

"Then you brought the basket, or sent it?" she cried. "It was you! How dared you!"

She had half risen from her chair. Bending across the table, he gently pushed her back into it.

"Sit down," he said, imperturbably.

She hesitated, and he repeated the command, this time almost curtly. Under the new tone she obeyed.

"I'm going to tell you something," he went on. "I've exhausted my slender resources of experience and tact. I don't know what anyone else would do in this situation; but I do know what I'm going to do myself. And, what is a lot more important, I know what you're going to do."

She laughed, and he winced at the sound.

"That's easy," she said. "I'm going to finish the act you interrupted."

"Oh, no, you're not!"

Her lips set.

"Do you imagine you can prevent me?"

"I know I can."

His quiet assurance impressed her.

"How?" she asked, half mockingly.

"Very easily. I can take you from this restaurant to the nearest police station, and have you locked up for attempted suicide. You know, it's a crime here."

The word they had both avoided was out at last. Although he had spoken it very softly, its echoes seemed to fill the big room. She shrank back and stared at him, her hands clutching the sides of her chair.

"You wouldn't dare!"

"Wouldn't I? I'll do it in exactly fifteen minutes, unless you give me your word that you will never make another attempt of the kind." He took his watch out of his pocket and laid it on the table between them. "It's exactly quarter past twelve," he said. "At half past—"

"Oh!—and I thought you were kind!"

There was horror in the brown eyes now and an antagonism that hurt him.

"Would it be kinder to let you go back to that studio and—"

"How dare you interfere in my affairs! Who gave you the right?"

"Fate gave me the right. I'm its chosen specialist on the job, and you may take my word for it, my dear girl, the job's going to be done, and done up brown."

He lit a fresh cigarette.

"It will be mighty unpleasant for you," he went on, thoughtfully. "There's the publicity, you know. Of course, all the newspapers will have your pictures—"

"Oh!"

"And a lot of romantic stories—"

"Oh—you—you—"

"But of course you can avoid all that," he reminded her, "by giving me your promise."

She choked back her rising fury, and made an obvious effort at self-control.

"If I agree to these terms of yours," she asked, between her teeth, "may I be sure that you will leave me in peace and that I shall not see you, again?"

He looked at her reproachfully.

"Dear me, no! Why, you'll have to see me every day. I've got to look after you for a while." At her expression his tone changed. "You see," he said, with smiling seriousness, "you have shown that just for the present you can't be trusted to guide your own actions. So I'm going to 'stick around,' and guide them for a few days, until I am sure you are yourself again!"

"This—" Again she choked on the words—"this is intolerable!"

"Oh, I don't think so. You can see for yourself that I mean well, and that I'm going to be a harmless sort of watchdog. Also, you can depend on me to go off duty as soon as it's safe. But for the present you're going to have a guardian; and it's up to you to decide whether that guardian shall be Laurence Devon, very much at your service, or the police force of the city of New York."

She had her chin in her hands now, in her characteristic pose, and was regarding him without resentment. When she finally spoke, it was without resentment, too, but coldly, as one states an unpalatable fact.

"You," she said, "are a fool."

Laurie flushed, then smiled.

"That is not a new theory," he admitted.

"Two hours ago," she said, "I warned you that it would be dangerous for you to interfere in my affairs. Did I not?"

"You did."

"I warn you again. It may be a matter of life or death. Put your watch in your pocket, pay your bill, and take me home. Then go away and forget me."

Laurie glanced at the watch.

"We have used up eight minutes since I gave you your choice," he reminded her.

"You are like a child," she muttered, "spinning his top over a powder magazine."

Laurie frowned a little.

"Too melodramatic," he murmured.

"I tell you," she said fiercely, "you are acting like a fool! If you interfere with me you will be drawn into all sorts of trouble, perhaps into tragedy, perhaps even into disgrace."

"You're forgetting the net," he reminded her, "the nice net you mentioned this morning, with room for two. Also—" again he looked at the watch—"you're overlooking the value of time. See how fast these little hands are moving. The nearest police station is only two blocks away. Unless you give me that promise, you will be in it in—" he made a calculation—"in just about four minutes."

She seemed to come to a decision.

"Listen to me," she said, rapidly. "I cannot be frank with you—"

"I've noticed that," Laurie interpolated, "with regret."

She ignored the interruption.

"But I can tell you this much. I am not alone in my trouble. Others are involved. They are—desperate. It is because of them that I—you understand?"

Laurie shook his head. He did not understand at all; but vague and unpleasant stories about espionage and foreign spies suddenly filtered through his mind.

"It sounds an awful mess," he said frankly. "If it's got anything to do with German propaganda—"

She interrupted with a gesture of impatience.

"No, no!" she cried. "I am not a German or a propagandist, or a pacifist or a spy. That much, at least, I can tell you."

"Then that's all right!" Laurie glanced at his watch again. "If you had been a German spy," he added, "with a little round knob of hair on the back of your head and bombs in every pocket, I couldn't have had much to do with you. I really couldn't. But as you and your companions are not involved in that kind of thing, I am forced to remind you that you'll be headed toward the station in just one minute."

"I hate you!" she said between her teeth.

He shook his head at her. "Oh, no, you don't!" he said kindly. "But I see plainly that you're a self-willed young person. Association with me, and the study of my poise, will do a lot for you. By the way, you have only thirty seconds left."

"Do you want to be killed?"

She hissed the words at him.

"Good gracious, no!" Laurie spoke absently, his eyes on the watch. "Twenty seconds," he ended.

"Do you want to be maimed or crippled, or—or kidnaped?"

He looked up in surprise.

"I don't know why you imagine I have such lurid taste," he said, discontentedly. "Of course I don't want any of those things. My nature is a quiet one, and already I'm dreading the excitement of taking you to the station. But now I must ask you to put on your gloves and button up your coat for our little journey."

"The journey you take with me," she said, with deep meaning, "may be a long and hard one."

He stood up.

"I wouldn't miss it for the world," he told her. "But we'll have to postpone it. Our journey to the station comes first."

She sat still, looking at him.

"I know your type now," she said suddenly. "You live in your little groove, and you think that nothing happens in the world except what you see under your nose."

"Something awfully unpleasant is going to happen under my nose right now," announced her companion, disconsolately. "Come along, please. It's time to start."

She stood up, faced him for a second, and then dropped back into her chair with a gesture of finality. Her expression had changed back to the lethargy of her first moments in the restaurant.

"Very well," she said. "Have it your way." She added significantly, "This may be the last time you have your way about anything!"

"You have a depressing outlook," grumbled Laurie, contentedly sitting down again. "It isn't playing the game to spoil my triumph with such predictions as that, especially as I'm going to have my way about a lot of things right now. I have your word," he added.

"Yes."

"Good! Now I'll give you my program. First, of all, I'm going to be a brother to you; and I don't think," he ended thoughtfully, "that I've ever offered to be a brother to any girl before."

"You're a nice boy," she said abruptly.

He smiled at her.

"A nice boy, though a fool. I hoped you would notice that. You'll be dazzled by my virtues before you're through with me." He went on conversationally: "The reason I've never offered to be a brother to any girl before is that I've got a perfectly good sister of my own. Her one fault is that she's always bossed me. I warn you from the start of our relations that I'm going to be the boss. It will be the first time I've ever bossed anyone, and I'm looking forward to it a lot."

The faintest suggestion of a smile touched her short upper lip. Above it, her red-brown eyes had softened again. She drew a deep breath.

"It's strange," she said. "You've let me in for all sorts of things you don't realize. And yet, somehow, I feel, for the time at least, as if I had been lying under the weight of the world and some one had lifted the wretched thing off me."

"Can't you, by a supreme effort of the imagination, fancy that I lifted it off?" suggested Laurie, mildly.

This time she really smiled.

"I can," she conceded. "And without any effort at all," she added somberly, "I can fancy us both under it again."

He shook his head.

A new character enters this mysterious drama. What does the girl fear? When will it strike?

Once upon a time there was a chorus girl who was not hungry after the show.

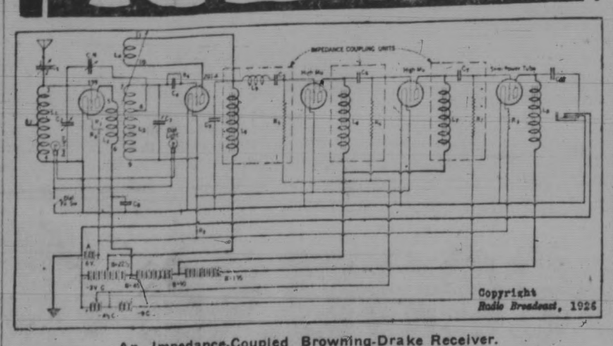
RADIO



An Impedance-Coupled Browning-Drake Receiver.

If a careful analysis of the outstanding receiver circuits of the past twelve months be made, it is not unlikely that of them all there will be only a few that rate high in popular esteem by virtue of their excellence in performance. Of these few not many were patterned after other than the old familiar tuned radio frequency plus regenerative detector circuit. In most cases, receivers are what they are because of the individual type of apparatus employed, providing that, to start with, a good circuit is selected.

The Browning-Drake, not an exception to the rule, is one receiver that amply illustrates this principle. First described in Radio Broadcast, this circuit has stood the test of time remarkably well. The circuit itself is not revolutionary; just a simple tuned, neutralized, radio-frequency amplifier, with regenerative detector. To this may be added any type of audio amplifier that strikes the fancy of the constructor. It is the tuned part of the receiver that requires the main attention because, with a good amplifier, the signal in the plate circuit of the detector tube may be amplified to the desired power and then outputted to a satisfactory loud speaker. In speaking so of the audio amplifier it is not the intent to belittle this very important section of a receiver; it is intended that emphasis be placed on that end of the receiver upon which we depend for the accomplishment of our tuning, for if that part of the receiver is not satisfactory the best audio amplifier in creation will not help matters..

The latest model of the Browning-Drake is the design of John B. Brennan, technical editor of Radio Broadcast Magazine, and is described by him in that publication.

The coils employed by the author are of a distinctly low-loss type, those specified being the special National Browning-Drake ones, space wound. However, it is a simple matter to construct the coils at home.

One problem in the design of a radio receiver has been to control volume effectively without affecting the quality of the output in the loud speaker. In cases where the volume control is incorporated in the audio amplifier channel of a receiver, some shifting of the audio frequency characteristics usually results when the control is varied. This change is one direct cause of imperfectness of quality. Some constructors place this volume control in the detector circuit; others in the radio-frequency amplifier circuit. In the Browning-Drake model described here the volume control, consisting of a variable 30-ohm resistance, is inserted in series with the filament baliast which regulates the flow of current to the radio-frequency tube. The advantages thus gained are two-fold: First, a very smooth control of volume is obtained without affecting the tone characteristic of the audio channel. Secondly, by placing the variable resistance in this position, overloading of the radio-frequency amplifier, especially on local station reception, is prevented. The control, at this point, enables the constructor to maintain a high degree of neutralization, which in turn allows of fine tuning without the probability of self-oscillation.

In the radio-frequency amplifier stage it was observed that a type 199 tube neutralized more perfectly and consistently than a 201-A tube. Also the actual gain for the 199 tube, taking into consideration the possibility of incomplete neutralization for the 201-A tube, was perhaps as much as with the latter, and is to be preferred in the final construction. In the detector circuit regeneration is obtained by the usual tickler method, whereby a movable coil is coupled to the secondary circuit. A 201-A tube is employed in this circuit.

For ease of assembly the National Impedaformers were selected, although if it is so desired, any standard type of choke coil, condenser and grid leak may be substituted. The National Impedaformers combine, in one unit, the choke coil, isolating condenser and grid leak; by means of convenient terminal posts it is a simple job to wire units into the circuit. Also, in the input unit, following the detector stage, a most serviceable radio-frequency choke coil is conveniently included within the housing. It is employed to insure against passing radio-frequency currents into the audio-frequency channel. The plate impedances L5, L6, L7 are of 100 henries each, and the grid leaks R5, R6, R7 are all 0.1 megohms. The isolating condensers C5, C6 and C7 are of 0.1 mfd. These values are given for those who prefer to buy their choke coils, etc., separately. Three stages of this impedance-coupled audio-frequency amplification are employed. In the first and second stages, high-Mu tubes permit of a higher amplification than if ordinary 201-A tubes were used. In the last stage a special output coil is included for the following reasons: Where quality output is desired of an audio amplifier, it is out of the question to use other than the type 112, 171, or other tubes especially designed for power work. With such a tube in the last stage better quality is obtained than if the 201-A type of tube were to be used. Since, with the power-output type of tube, it is necessary to employ a high value of "B" battery voltage on the plate, it would be ruinous to do so without making some provision for the protection of the loud speaker windings. This is exactly what the output coil does. Instead of the drag that is exerted on the diaphragm of the loud speaker by the direct current when the output coil is not contained in the circuit, thereby tending partly to paralyze the diaphragm, the special output circuit places on the loud speaker an a. c. signal voltage, allowing the diaphragm to swing freely in synchronism with the signal impulses or discharges of the isolating condenser in this circuit.

The List of Parts.

In review of the circuit we find it consists of the following: A stage of tuned, neutralized, radio-frequency amplification and a regenerative detector followed by three stages of impedance-coupled audio-frequency amplification, in the output of which is arranged a special isolating device as a protection for the loud speaker.

To construct a receiver similar to the model described, the following parts should be obtained:

Use of Power Tube to Give Greater Volume

Power tubes designed for use in the last stages of radio sets are designed to deliver a greater volume of signal to the loudspeaker than can be obtained with ordinary tubes without overloading them. The dry-cell power tubes are especially effective for use in operating loudspeakers from dry-cell tubes. Certain storage-battery and light-socket tubes deliver enough signal volume to furnish music for dancing in large halls. Power tubes are usually operated with higher "B"-battery and "C"-battery voltage than ordinary tubes, and must therefore be used in sets equipped with separate "B" and "C"-battery terminals for the power tubes.

Watch Lead Prongs on Your Radio Receiver

The lead prongs of the tube sometimes become corroded and thus impair proper reception. This can easily be remedied by cleaning them with an ordinary nail file. The prongs on the socket sometimes become bent down and thus the tube does not make proper contact with the socket. These socket prongs may be bent up again by inserting an ordinary hairpin under them and pulling upward. Care should be taken, however, so as not to break the prong off.

Difference Between Dry and Storage Batteries

A storage battery takes electrical energy, stores it in the form of a chemical action and then changes it back to electrical energy when the battery is placed in service. This action can be repeated many times before the battery is worn out. A dry cell develops electrical energy from chemical action. In order to repeat the process when the battery is discharged it is necessary to renew the chemicals.

Use Good Tools

When making a serious study of the construction and experimentation of radio sets provision should be made for the necessary tools. Have these as good as can be afforded, for no good work can be done without good instruments. Learn how to use them and then use them right.

Light Incidental

The idea that the brighter a radio tube shines the better reception will be had is erroneous. The amount of light is no indication of the tube's sensitiveness. The light of the bulb is an incidental feature of its operation.

A Suggestion

If the socket of a vacuum tube does not fit snugly around the base, wrap several thicknesses of strip paper cut to a width that is equal to the height of the base.

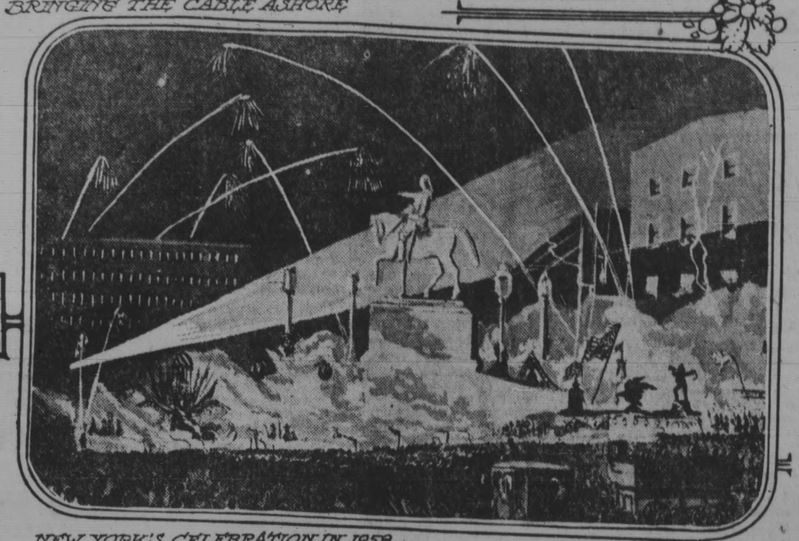
The World's Fastest Cable

BRINGING THE CABLE ASHORE

"AGAMEMNON" AND "NIAGARA" WHICH LAID THE 1858 CABLE



NEW YORK'S CELEBRATION IN 1858

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE recent announcement that the Western Union Telegraph company had completed laying a new cable across the Atlantic which will have the distinction of being "the world's fastest cable," in the sense that it can transmit legible signals at least five times as rapidly as any heretofore laid, recalls the whole romantic history of man's attempt to bridge great distances and speed up communication between the distant parts of the earth. It recalls particularly the name of Cyrus Field, the American paper merchant who, undaunted by several failures, persisted until success crowned his efforts and made his name immortal.

When the new cable was landed in New York last month, it was an event of great importance, but so accustomed have we become to events of world importance that there were none of the scenes of wild enthusiasm which swept the country upon Cyrus Field's successful completion of his task. In those days they were more given to public celebrations of great events by torchlight processions and appropriate oratory.

Up until that time rapid communication had been impossible. When the treaty which ended the Revolution was signed in 1783, the citizens of the new Republic did not know it until 86 days later. Conditions were much the same by the time of the War of 1812 and, as every schoolboy knows, the battle of New Orleans was fought after the treaty of peace had been signed.

Although faster steamships had speeded up communication between the Old world and the New in the next four decades, there was still no instantaneous communication and men had laughed at Field as a dreamer and something of a crank when he first proposed to link England and America with an undersea cable over which telegraphic messages could be sent.

But when the Agamemnon and the Niagara completed their job of laying the first cable in August, 1858, and Field's faith in his project was justified, those who had derided him were among the first to hail him.

With the coming of the first transatlantic cable came the prospect of business quickening its pace. This prospect was at first viewed with considerable incredulity, but as the messages of Queen Victoria and President Buchanan flashed over the wires doubts gave way to tumultuous rejoicing. The new line was in actual operation, but it had come only after a series of disappointments. It had cost its projector twelve years of constant toil and had necessitated more than thirty trips across the Atlantic.

But with the first doubts gone the new cable was welcomed with open arms. The simple announcement that it was to be landed produced the greatest excitement everywhere. In some places business was suspended and men rushed into the streets and flocked to the offices where the news was received. At Andover, Mass., the news was received while the alumni of the Theological seminary were celebrating their semi-centennial dinner. One thousand persons were present, all of whom rose to their feet and gave vent to their feelings by continued and enthusiastic cheers. In Boston a hundred guns were fired on the common and the bells of the city were rung for an hour.

In New York the news was at first received with some misgivings. As it was confirmed, however, by subsequent dispatches the city broke forth into wild rejoicing. The arrival of the queen's message was the signal for a fresh outbreak of popular enthusiasm. The city was awakened by the thunder of artillery. A hundred guns were fired in the park at daybreak, and the salute was repeated at noon. At this hour flags were flying from all the public buildings and the bells of the principal churches began to ring. That night the city was illuminated. Never had it seen such a brilliant celebration. The very sky seemed to be alight with the spectacle. Such was the blaze of light around city hall that the cupola caught fire and the hall itself narrowly escaped destruction. Similar demonstrations took place in other parts of the United States. From the Atlantic to the Valley of the Mississippi and to the Gulf of Mexico the firing of guns and the ringing of bells were heard in every city.

The new cable broke down after two months of operation and the courageous American paper merchant who had been the force behind the enterprise could raise no more funds in America. Most of the original capital lost in his first venture had, indeed, come from England, the majority of the 345 men who had subscribed one thousand pounds each to the enterprise being Englishmen. And with a Civil war impending and soon actually under way Field could look for no further financial aid on this side of the ocean.

He went again to England and succeeded, after long negotiations, in obtaining capital with which to build and lay a new cable. The Gutta-Percha company, which had then a practical monopoly of the necessary insulating material, was given the order to build the new cable, which was completed in 1865. The steamship Great Eastern, the largest craft ever built up to that time—larger, in fact, than any ship constructed for another forty years—which had proved a commercial failure in spite of her size, or perhaps because of it, was chartered to lay the new cable. Twelve hundred miles had been paid out when the cable parted, on August 2, and all efforts to recover it proved fruitless.

Once more ruin stared Field's project in the face. It seemed as if fate had decreed that there should never be telegraphic communication between the continents. But at this critical juncture in cable history John Pender, the head of the Gutta-Percha company, came forward with the proposal to risk a quarter of a million pounds of his own money in the effort to carry out the project. Under his leadership the Atlantic Telegraph company was reconstituted as the Anglo-American Telegraph company with a capital of 600,000 pounds of which he subscribed for nearly half. The Gutta-Percha company became the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance company. A new cable was made and enough additional to complete the cable of 1865. The Great Eastern was purchased and on July 13, 1866, steamed into Trinity bay, Newfoundland, trailing behind her a continuous line of cable stretching back to the Irish coast. The shore end was landed safely, the Great Eastern steamed eastward again, grappled for the lost end of the 1865 cable, recovered it, spliced on a new section and on September 8 landed this also in Newfoundland.

It is interesting to note that in the new cable which spans the Atlantic from Bay Roberts, Newfoundland, to Penzance, England, history is repeating itself, for in 1912 the Western Union Telegraph company became the operating successor of the Anglo-American Telegraph company, leasing the five cables then owned by the original company, between Great Britain and the United States, and so great is the advance over all previous cable systems which the new cable inaugurates, its completion seems destined to mark the beginning of almost as much of a new era in international communications, as the laying of the 1866 cable did.

Though the deep sea section of the cable is only an inch in diameter, an examination of a cross-section of it, as illustrated above, shows it to be composed of a number of distinct parts consisting of different materials.

The innermost section of this slender line of communication which will link two continents is the copper conductor. It is a round wire not quite one-fifth of an inch in diameter. This carries the electric current through the cable.

Around this wire are wrapped six flexible copper tapes which, in case the cable breaks, carry the current around the gap. The purpose of these copper tapes is to give flexibility to the conductor. An accident to the cable lying on the floor of the Atlantic which might break a solid conductor consisting of a single strand and put the line of communication out of business could hardly break all the strands of a taped conductor.

Wrapped around the 3,800 nautical miles of this copper conductor to span the Atlantic from New York to London will be a continuous strip of permalloy, the new magic metal which will give the cable its capacity of 2,500 letters per minute. Permalloy is an alloy of iron and nickel which under certain conditions has a magnetic permeability many times that of any other known substance. This wrapping prevents the leakage of current common to the older types of cables and will give the new copper strand its great speed and make it the world's fastest cable.

Next to the permalloy is the insulation consisting of three layers of gutta percha. This is the only substance yet discovered which combines the necessary insulating qualities with elasticity, simplicity of manipulation, and durability. It is obtained from a tree which grows in the Malay peninsula and Malaysia. The process of gathering it consists in tapping the gutta tree much as a sugar maple is tapped in North America and collecting the sap which exudes. The most familiar use of gutta percha is in the manufacture of the outer shells of golf balls.

Over the gutta percha insulation is placed a layer of jute yarn to act as a cushion for the armor which protects the cable from being broken by any accident which might occur on the bed of the ocean.

This armor consists of eighteen galvanized steel wires, each having a diameter of nine-hundredths of an inch. Before being applied to the cable each is wrapped over its entire length with a fabric to prevent its oxidation under water. Finally, the cable is wrapped with two servings of jute yarn saturated in coal tar, wound on spirally, which form the outer covering.

This copper strand connecting the Old world with the new will be the twentieth transatlantic cable and the ninth to be operated by the Western Union.

Although it would seem that radio development had made deep-sea cables obsolete, the fact remains that cable companies continue to spend millions of dollars on new cable costs, for all that they have a full knowledge of radio's capacity and the lines of its probable future development. The importance of cables in world relations was demonstrated at the close of the World war when an international complication threatened over the island of Yap. Yap ordinarily would be as unimportant as its name suggests were it not for the fact that the question of a cable base was involved. So it is likely that the future will see the network of cable lines connecting all parts of the earth increase instead of decrease and whenever a new one, and especially one such as the "world's fastest cable" in which important new developments are concerned, is laid it will be news and big news.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN BORN IN SAME YEAR

Queen Victoria and Lydia E. Pinkham

MRS. ANNA McHENRY
1005 E. PLUM STREET, MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far-reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Marshall, Illinois.—"After my second child was born, I never saw a well day for five years. My father was telling his druggist about my condition, and the druggist insisted that father take a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have me try it, as it had helped his wife. I had given up, but to please father and mother, I commenced taking your medicine and in a week I had begun to feel better. When I passed through the Change of Life, I was taking the Vegetable Compound and I had no trouble of any kind."—Mrs. Anna McHenry, 1005 E. Plum St., Marshall, Illinois.

Another Woman Helped

Philadelphia, Penna.—Mrs. Caroline Nagy, of 2717 Sears St., in a recent letter to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., says that after her child was born she was in a very weak condition. She could not seem to regain her health and went to her mother for advice. She told her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it had helped her when in like condition, and it has helped her mother also. So Mrs. Nagy started taking it. She felt better after taking the first bottle,—after taking six bottles her weakness and other troubles disappeared, and she is never done praising the Compound.

In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wild Life Not Wiped Out by Civilization

Notwithstanding a population of several million in northwestern states, and cities from 100,000 to 450,000, Oregon, Washington and Idaho still retain a generous supply of wild life of the primeval wilderness, mostly within national parks and forests. The federal forest service has just completed a census showing Washington still has 50 caribou and 15 grizzlies, unknown to hunters and to millions who never have seen them. Idaho and Oregon have grizzlies, but no caribou.

Deer are the most numerous of the larger animals, numbering 100,000, of which Oregon has 50,000. Washington boasts 8,500 elk, Oregon 3,500 and Idaho 2,000. There are mountain goats, sheep, black bear, all the predatory prowlers and numbers of fur bearers in the wilder parts of the region. The census proves that with protection all wild life tends to increase rapidly.

A machine measuring the amount of laughter and applause was operated recently in a theater in New York city. The box containing the indicating apparatus was placed at the back of the auditorium and showed the various effects of the "gag" lines as flashed on the screen.

Lake Well Adapted for Game Preserve

The only lake in Colorado that does not freeze over in winter may soon become a haven for wild fowl. A plan is afoot to try the unique scheme of encouraging game birds of various kinds to make this lake their year-around residence so that the region immediately surrounding it could be used as an extraordinary game preserve. The lake, which stands near a steam-operated electric plant at Valmont, Colo., does not freeze because warm water is constantly discharged into it by the boiler and turbine circulation system of the near-by plant. It steadily feeds cool water into the system and thus performs a necessary service to the people of Colorado who use the lighting and power current the steam plant produces. The temperature tests show that in winter the water averages 45 degrees Fahrenheit near the top of the lake and 41 degrees near the bottom. The lake covers 120 acres, but could be easily extended to include 540 acres, thus increasing its possibilities as a game haven.

News Photographer Obliged

In London a short time ago at a smart wedding the bridegroom, for the accommodation of the newspaper photographers, kissed the bride just before the couple entered the bridal carriage. One disconsolate newspaper man missed the "shot," and explaining his dilemma to the bridegroom, the latter readily assented to repeat the kiss so that the photographer would not be called on the carpet by his editor for missing the picture.—Washington Star.

MRS. GRACE COOPER MAKING STRONG CAMPAIGN

Mrs. Grace Lawrence Cooper, our obliging and efficient deputy county treasurer, has been making a strong campaign for the office of county treasurer at the election to be held on November 2nd and her many friends throughout the county are rallying to her support.

Mrs. Cooper has long been a resident of Redwood City and is one of the pioneer Lawrence family of Millbrae. For the past few years Mrs. Cooper has been deputy county treasurer under P. P. Chamberlain, who has held that office for the past forty-four years, and is very familiar with all of the duties and workings of the office and is thoroughly capable of filling the position to which she aspires.

At the primary election Mrs. Cooper received the highest vote of all of the candidates, at which election two other Redwood City people were candidates, and we feel sure that their friends will now almost unanimously support Mrs. Cooper. All of the present county officials who have so capably filled their positions have been returned to office with the exception of Mr. Chamberlain, who announced his retirement some time ago. In retiring Mr. Chamberlain recommended Mrs. Cooper as his successor in office and urged his many friends throughout the county to vote for her, and we feel sure that at the coming general election that Mrs. Cooper will be added to our list of county officials.
